Abstract	The Wor(l)ds Lab research group at the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid invites members across CIVIS to a Disciplinary Meeting on Digital Humanities. The purpose of the meeting is to learn about each other's projects and activities in order to foster collaboration for joint teaching and research. DH sit at the crossroads of computer science and the humanities, bringing digital tools and methods to the study of the humanities. Being a field typically collaborative and transdisciplinary, we are sure that CIVIS will be a perfect platform for building a strong network of teaching, research, tools, and best practices. Therefore the central part of the Disciplinary Meeting will be a discussion about future collaboration and next steps to be taken.
