

Centre for International Sustainable Development Law
3644 Peel Street, Montreal,
Quebec, Canada
H3A 1W9

17 February 2022

Dear Professor Emmanuella Doussis,

On behalf of the Centre for International Sustainable Development Law and its global network of university law faculty, inter-governmental organization, judicial, institutional and other legal expert partners, we are delighted to congratulate you for being nominated to and winning the 2021 CISDL Natural Resources International Legal Specialist Award.

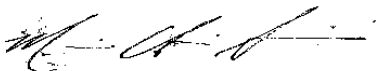

As you may be aware, these annual International Legal Specialist Awards seek to recognize international jurists for their outstanding contributions to law and policy innovation supporting the achievement of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), particularly in relation to key global challenges of climate change, biodiversity loss, respect for human rights, access to health, sustainable trade and investment, natural resources management, and peace, justice and good governance. You have been selected for your exemplary insights, knowledge, and dedication to furthering natural resources management and sustainable development throughout the world. Past winners of this illustrious Award include Professor Dr David Boyd (2020, Human Rights), Professor Dr Christina Voigt (2020, Climate Change), and Adv Sean Stephenson (2019, Trade & Investment).

As a recipient of this International Legal Specialist Award, we would very much like to ensure you are featured prominently on our website and social media platforms. Please may we request you to provide us with an updated biography and photograph of your choice for this feature by return mail. Please may we also request for your current residential address so we may be able to courier you your Award pin.

We would also request your presence at the 2022 CISDL Biennial Conference, which will be hosted online in July 2022, with dates to be finalized by the end of February, so we may celebrate your work and recognize you as our 2021 International Legal Specialist Award winner with the appropriate pomp and circumstance.

Warmest of congratulations again and thank you for your invaluable dedication to the field of international law and the advancement of sustainability.

Very highest regards,

Professor Dr Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger
Senior Director, CISDL

Dr Ashfaq Khalfan,
Chair of the CISDL Board of Governors