Fellowship of the European Academy of Cancer Sciences

Dear Prof. Gorgoulis,

Following the nominations for the 2020-2021 election of the European Academy of Cancer Sciences, we are delighted to inform you that you have been elected a Fellow of this prestigious body.

The Academy, launched in 2009, is an independent advisory body of distinguished oncologists and cancer researchers, placing science at the core of policies to reduce death and suffering caused by cancer in Europe.

It operates as a 'virtual' body, bringing together individuals with outstanding scientific and academic credentials covering all cancer disciplines. The EACS aspires to provide independent, authoritative and evidence-based recommendations to underpin policy for more effective prevention, early detection, therapy, and palliation of cancer in Europe.

The Academy Fellows define the overall objectives of the Academy and warrant the credibility of the institution, elect of new members and the Governing Board. The 'Governing Board steers the activities of the EACS. It consists of a President, a Past-President, a Secretary-General and Fellows representing key disciplines Europe-wide. The EACS was established in 2010. Current members of Governing Board are:

Anton Berns, President
Alexander M.M. Eggermont, Past-President
Ulrik Ringborg, Secretary-General
Michael Baumann
Carlos Caldas
Fatima Carneiro
Julio Celis
Francesco de Lorenzo

As a Fellow of the Academy, you may be approached to contribute to the preparation of position papers and proposals that provide the scientific background to EU institutions for implementing new policies that ensure that cancer remains at the top of the European health and research agenda.

As such, the European Academy of Cancer Sciences aims to collectively address the societal challenge that cancer is posing in Europe at large.

EUROPEAN ACADEMY
OF CANCER SCIENCES

As such the European Academy of Cancer Sciences is an illustrative example of a renowned multidisciplinary team of specialists with expertise across the entire cancer continuum and with members from all over Europe, closely collaborating to ensure that the interests of cancer patients remain at the forefront of EU policy.

We highly value you becoming part of this exciting and important endeavour.

Should you have any queries, please do not hesitate to contact the Academy Secretariat at Academy@europeancanceracademy.eu .

Yours sincerely,

Anton Berns
